Reuvain had a successful business and comfortable lifestyle... until his kidneys failed. Without his constant attention, his business began to flounder and life began to unravel. Bills went unpaid and his phone service was shut down. When his doctor tried to reach him about a possible kidney donor, Reuvein's phone was out of service. The downward spiral continued until someone alerted Zichron Shlomo. The organization stepped in and paid the bills, setting Reuvain back on the path to normalcy. ■

Critically ill and scheduled for surgery, the kollel youngster had many things on his mind. But when he called Zichron Shlomo, he mentioned only one. Bashfully, he explained that his wife was soon due, and he wanted to present her with a gift... a piece of jewelry. Could Zichron Shlomo help? The answer came in the form of a beautiful diamond pin. ■

Dina has long been known as a powerhouse. At 63 years old, she filled the position of school administrator with as much energy and enthusiasm as she had for the past 30 years. Then disaster struck: headaches, nausea, disorientation... Dina had a brain tumor. Unable to continue in her position, but without enough savings to permit her to retire, Dana faced mounting bills and increased despair. Zichron Shlomo stepped in, took over her expenses, and gave Dana hope once again. ■

Meira's cancer has left her tired, weak, and ill. She spends long stretches of time recuperating in bed, and is just barely keeping up with the housework. The thought of Pesach just makes her feel worse. She knows there is no way she can clean the house herself, but neither can she afford or properly supervise any hired help. Zichron Shlomo had a solution: an all-expenses paid Pesach in the Oppenheimer Hotel. ■

Mindy is a cheerful 6th grader with good grades, many friends, and stomach cancer. The diagnosis horrified her parents, who didn't know how they could afford to help their daughter maintain a normal lifestyle while undergoing pricy treatment. They managed, though. With a wig, paid doctor bills, and thoughtful gifts tailored to the young patient's needs, all discreetly provided by Zichron Shlomo. ■
